SECOND COLLECTION

February 4 & 5

The second collection this weekend will benefit the St. Teresa's Building & Maintenance Fund.

February 11 & 12

The second collection next week will benefit the Carmelite Missionaries. The missionaries' task to teach the Gospel's message to the poor in the parts of the world they serve – places like Peru, Mexico and Brazil, India, Indonesia and the Philippines, and Zimbabwe, Cameroon and the Congo often seems impossible when you consider the odds against them.

These regions have 70% of the world's people, but only 10% of the world's wealth.

Eight million children are completely abandoned on the streets of Brazil – thousands of them in the "favela" slums where Carmelites minister in the especially destitute regions of Rio de Janeiro and Recife.

In the diocese of Sicuani, in the Peruvian Andes, 90% of the people are illiterate, one out of four children die before their first birthday, and most of the people suffer from hunger and malnutrition.

All monies collected go directly to the missionaries to assist them with this important work.

2011 AAA UPDATE

As of January 31:

Assessed Amount: $26,600
Amount Received: $19,121 (71.9%)
Amount Needed: $ 7,479 (28.1%)

We will continue to accept donations for AAA 2011 until the end of February but these donations will be acknowledged for the Tax Year 2012.

If we are unable to meet our goal, we are required to pay the shortfall from parish operating expenses.

WEEKEND COLLECTION

January 28 & 29

$1,383

THE CULLINAN WINDOW: INTRIGUE SURROUNDING THE PAPAL TIARA

St. Teresa's Church contains seventeen stained glass windows: twelve in the main body of the Church, two in the left and right sanctuaries, and three in the vestibule. These windows are being restored as funds become available. This week's column focuses on the newly restored Papal Tiara Window, located in the southwest corner of the vestibule facing Connecticut Street.

The Cullinan Window of the Papal Tiara is one of the oldest windows in St. Teresa's Church, dating, perhaps, from the first decade of the 20th century. The fact that the window is obscured by the stairs to the choir loft suggests that this was not the window's original location. We believe that, originally, the window was in the main body of the Church and that it was one of the windows which survived a major fire. The present twelve windows in the main body of the church – which portray events in the life of Christ – date from the 1930s, suggesting that the Tiara Window was moved to the vestibule at about that time.

When the tiara window was removed for restoration, the restorer commented that "we are not allowed to make (tiara) windows like this any more." I found this intriguing and did some research as to why this might be so.

The tiara – the pope's crown – has been worn by popes since the 8th century, and the three-tiered form (depicted in our window) has been around since the 14th century. The tiara is a non-liturgical ornament, which, therefore, is only worn for non-liturgical ceremonies, such as a ceremonial procession to church and back (the mitre is the liturgical ornament worn by the pope). A representation of the triple tiara combined with two crossed keys (which is portrayed in our window) was and continues to be used as a symbol of the papacy, appearing on papal documents, buildings and insignia.

The last pope to wear a tiara was Paul VI. In November 1963, in a gesture of humility symbolizing the papacy's surrender of any claim to temporal power, Pope Paul placed the tiara on the altar of St. Peter's Basilica and never wore it again. The tiara was to be sold and the proceeds given to charity, but Francis Spellman, Cardinal Archbishop of New York, arranged for the tiara to be bought by the Catholic Church in the United States. It is now on permanent display in the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C.

There are at least twenty-four tiaras in existence, the earliest dating from the 16th century. The pope, at his discretion, may choose to wear the tiara. However, following the gesture of Paul VI, the subsequent popes (John Paul I, John Paul II, and Benedict XVI) chose not to wear the tiara at the ceremony celebrating their election and investiture.

Because the tiara is a non-liturgical ornament and is associated with temporal power, creating a stained glass window of a tiara would, today, be "politically incorrect". However, when St. Teresa's window was created 100 years ago, it was during a time that celebrated the "high point" of the papacy, a century-long period that spanned roughly from the reign of Pius IX (1846-1878) through Pius XII (1939-1958).

We believe that the tiara in our window is the Palatine Tiara, the most widely used Papal Tiara in the possession of the Vatican. It was donated to Pope Pius IX in 1877 by the Holy See's Palatine Guard to commemorate his jubilee as a bishop. It was last worn by Pope John XXIII.

The window was originally dedicated to the memory of John Cullinan. The 2012 restoration was made possible through the generous donations of our parishioners.
